DOWN MEMORY LANE: 50 YEARS AGO

JFK IN THE EARLY 1970'S

In 1970 senior high schools in Taylor were comprised of grades 10, 11 & 12. And even though only 3 grades were in the building, JFK was overcrowded as the building was designed for 1,250 students and 1,800 were enrolled. This created the need for unique class scheduling, such as, how to provide students with enough time to eat in the cafeteria. This was solved by creating 3 different blocks during 4th hour.

✓ Block "A" had 30 minutes to go to the cafeteria and then to a 60 minute class.

✓ Block "B" had 30 minutes of a class, then 30 minutes to the cafeteria, then back to the same class for 30 minutes more.

✓ Block "C" had a 60 minute class and 30 minutes at the cafeteria.

Obviously, tough to schedule and could not possibly split some classes such as Physical Education or those that required set up time such as Wood Shop, Chemistry, etc., so Block B was made up of Math, Languages and Social Studies classes. Not ideal but it worked.

In addition to the unusual lunch program, other steps were needed to house that many students. Some of the Advanced Placement (College Curriculum) courses had from 70 to 90 students in a class in the cafeteria with 3 instructors. Each instructor had an assignment to teach from a position on the stage while the other two monitored and assisted the class. Regardless of its limitation, the system proved very successful.

RECENT COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS IN A TAYLOR HIGH SCHOOL

The Principal gave the following speech: Seniors, being a teacher at heart, I just can't help myself but to take every opportunity to teach a lesson. This is a lesson that has its roots with the well-known billionaire, Bill Gates, who used this lesson while giving a commencement speech. But not to worry, there will be no homework or quiz, but there will be a test and that test is real life.

In life there are ten rules, they are:

1. Life is not fair; get used to it, and nobody wants to hear you whine.

2. The world doesn't care about your selfesteem, nor what you have to say. The world expects you to accomplish something before you feel good about yourself, and before others will listen to what you have to tell them.

3. You will not make a hundred thousand dollars a year right out of high school, nor be the vice president of a major company, until you've earned it. 4. If you think your teachers were tough, wait until you have a boss who isn't emotionally vested in your wellbeing, or focused on your success.

5. Flipping burgers is not beneath your dignity. Your grandparents had a different word for burger flipping; they called it opportunity.

6. If you mess up, it's not your parent's fault, it's not your teacher's fault, it's not your buddy's fault, it's your fault; live up to it, and learn something from it.

7. Before you were born, your parents weren't as boring as they are now. They got that way from paying your bills, cleaning up after you, feeding you, housing you, supporting you, and loving you. So, before you go off to save the rain forest, or clean up the mistakes made by your parent's generation, why don't you start first by cleaning up your own room; and by giving your parents the respect and appreciation they deserve.

8. Life is not divided into trimesters. You don't get summers off, and very few employers are interested in helping you find yourself. You can do that on your own time.

9. Television is not real life. In real life people actually have to leave the coffee shop and go to work.

10. Be nice to nerds..... Chances are you'll end up working for one.
